- At the age of ten, while in P.6 at Zigiti Parents' School, Owino had dropped out of school, following the influence of a bad peer group of which he was a member.
- Whenever he left for school, this boy could go to a car wash, where one of the group members used to spend most of his time. Here, Owino used to wash people's cars and would get one thousand shillings for each car he washed. This small money blinded his eyes and he forgot about education.
- One morning as usual, Owino went to join Bondo at the car wash. Bondo had finished washing a brand new Subaru that belonged to an army officer in a nearby village.
- Immediately Owino reached, Bondo suggested to him that they take a drive since he had always seen how his colleagues could start and drive cars. The two boys decided to drive to the supermarket, with Bondo behind the steering.

Hardly had they joined the highway when they met two traffic policemen. The traffic policemen stopped them after watching the careless way the car was being driven.

At this moment, Owino and Bondo were sweating. They regretted why they had behaved like that.

"Young boys, get out!" shouted one of the policemen as the other one loosened the handcuffs, ready to arrest these boys. In a blink of an eye, the two boys had been handcuffed and taken to a nearby police station.

They were sent to the cells where they found criminals of every kind. These criminals had their leader known as Katikiro. He told them to kneel down, remove all their clothes and hand to him all the money they had. Worried, the boys followed Katikiro's commands.

When he asked them what offence they had committed, the boys could not answer since they had already known that missing school was behind this fateful day. Their parents heard of this on Tululu FM, a local radio station. They went to Mbizinya Police station, only to find their children behind bars yet they had left home to go to school. I love myself
Each time you taste me
I see the smiles on your faces
The young and the old
All enjoy my usual cover, the icing

I attend almost all joyous functions
For without me, the party is uninteresting
At birthdays, children will fight for me
At graduations, I am a usual guest
Introductions and weddings,
I comfortably sit waiting for the knife

One tier for the relatives, the MC says
Another one for the friends
And the centre piece for the celebrants
No one washes their hands to enjoy me
That it is one of the taboos
No regular shape and uniform size
When I am being served on a saucer, plate or tray

Mr. mourner, why ignore me!
At your function, I am not welcomed
Yet it is also worthy celebrating
For a life one has lived
Better enjoy me, for time waits for no man.
