Mwamini is a Congolese girl, but her father works in Wakiso District. So, Mwamini studies in one of the best schools in that District.

Last year, when Mwamini was in Primary six, her father sent her to bank school fees in Tropical Standard Bank, Wakiso Branch. When she entered the bank, she picked a bank pay-in-slip. She started filling it. A man came from one of the seats and told Mwamini that she had filled the wrong form. He instead told her to fill the deposit form. Mwamini was puzzled. She asked the stranger to do it for her.

The stranger filled in his own account number instead of the school account. Mwamini gave him the money and it was paid to the cashier. The man quickly disappeared. Then the cashier gave Mwamini the customer's copy of the deposit form. She read it, she saw that the money had not been paid on the school account. She then informed the guards in the bank. Lucky enough, the bank has CCTV cameras inside it. The man's footage had been recorded. The footage was then taken to Wakiso Central Police Station. The Officer-in-charge took it to PML Television to be announced.

By the end of the day, the security officers in Wakiso had arrested the thief. He was taken to court and the magistrate sentenced him to ten years in prison. He was also asked to return the money to Mwamini. Mwamini's parents thanked the bank for having good guards and cameras. They also thanked the police and security agencies for the work well done.
