Commercial banks are very important. Many years ago, there used not to be banks. People would keep their money in either pots, tins or under their beds. This money was not safe at all because it could easily be stolen by thieves or even some untrustworthy family members. This money could even be damaged by rats and ants.

Gone are those days when that used to happen. Nowadays, there are many commercial banks all over the country. They offer different financial services to their customers. These services include keeping money and other valuable items like documents, gold, diamond and so on. Banks also lend money to customers in form of loans. However, if one gets a loan from the bank, one must pay back that money with an interest at an agreed interest rate. Commercial banks in Uganda include: dfcu Bank, Equity Bank, Bank of Baroda, Stanbic Bank, Centenary Bank, Bank of Africa and many more.

All commercial banks in a country are controlled by the Central Bank. The Central Bank of Uganda is called Bank of Uganda. The Central Bank is responsible for printing money i.e. the bank notes and coins. It also monitors all the commercial banks operating in the country. It also gives loans to commercial banks and it collects or withdraws all old bank notes and coins, destroys them and then replaces them with new ones.

You will note that no individual can open or own an account in the Central Bank. One can only open an account in a commercial bank.
