SECTION B

51. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow in full sentences.

Environmental activists have called for tougher measures against encroachers on wetlands and forests across Uganda. Kasim Ngabirano, the Chief Executive Officer of Environmental Safeguard International (ESI) said the recent implementation of current directives issued by H.E. Museveni should be enforced. The president issued a directive banning tree cutting and charcoal exportation.

To meet the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goal on reduction of global carbon – dioxide production to zero level by 2050, we must act. Ngabirano said the Government must reduce the negative effects of climate change.

He advised, however, that before the presidential directives are implemented, Government should provide alternatives to charcoal and timber use.

In Uganda, 80% of citizens depend on firewood and charcoal to cook. Charcoal burning is a major economic activity in forested areas of Northern Uganda, Kalangala and in Buganda.

Looking at the population of Uganda, very few people can afford the alternative sources of energy for cooking. It would be stupid to implement directives without providing alternatives to charcoal and timber. What are the alternatives to firewood and charcoal? Gas, solar and hydro-electricity are the only alternatives. What are the alternatives to timber? Metallic bars made from aluminium and iron are the answer.

However, the cost of gas, solar, hydro-electricity and metallic bars is very high. These are too expensive to be afforded by people. We appeal to Government and to utility providers to reduce the cost of these items.

Environmental protection is the only way we can save human beings from being killed. Cut one tree, plant ten trees. Do not cut traditional trees down, instead, make charcoal and firewood from planted forests. No trees, no forests, no forests no rain! Let's fight to rescue the forests.
