January 18th 2015 is the day I will never forget in my life. This is because it is the day PLE 2014 results were released by UNEB. On that day, the minister of Education and sports announced that S.ST had been performed very well followed by Mathematics then Science and lastly English.

After receiving the news, I ran to the bedroom and told my brother who had sat P.L.E that year. As soon as he got the message, he began crying in fear of bad results. He told me to escort him to school so that he could get the results.

Throughout the 4 kilometre journey, my brother and I did not say a single word. In my heart, I believed he would pass because all along he had been one of the best candidates in his class.

As soon as we reached the headmaster's officer, all the teachers stood and jumped to received him, "Our boy!" they shouted in excitement.

"What a bright boy you are! You got us aggregate 5! You had a D₂ in Science otherwise you would get a four." This broke my brother's silence and we joined the cerebrations. One could hardly tell that we had walked without uttering a word for about an hour until we reached school.

We then picked the results and thanked the headmaster together with our teachers before we left. We walked back home happily.

I was extremely happy for my brother because dad had promised to throw us a party if our brother got a mark that would take him to Namilyango College School, the school of his first choice. My brother kept on saying, "God is good, Alex!" You should also work hard so that by this time next year, we get the same excitement. You will make it, just listen to the teachers, my brother," he concluded.

I regret why I caused an accident
Yet I could avoid the incident
I am looking for a place to hide
Where no traffic officer will see me.
Nor anybody who can report me
That the victim is here.
Not knowing am on fire.

I regret causing an accident
Yet I could have stopped
May be I could have only slapped
The young boy for carelessness
But again I remember my kindness
Still I could have forgiven
Because I always think of heaven
I need a place to hide.

I regret knocking a school boy.
Who I could have saved
Because I could have weaved
And leave him aside
Remember this boy had waved
I need a place to hide this morning.
Where no traffic police will see me.

I regret the high speed
Too the road sign I didn't read
I could have known the need
And use of a zebra-crossing
But now I need a place to hide.
Am now tired of wandering.
