Alex always wanted to have a bicycle. He admired Matama who had one. Matama was the "village king". All the children in the village respected him. They never wanted to make him angry. They carried his books while coming back from school. They also gave him eats at break time. They did all this so that Matama could give them a lift on his bicycle or give them his bicycle to ride.

One day, Alex asked Matama to give him his bicycle. Matama refused. He said that Alex was too fat to sit on his bicycle. Alex felt very bad. He talked to his father about it. His father promised to buy a bicycle for him if he performed very well.

Alex became serious with his studies. He did all the exercises and never dodged classes. He performed very well at the end of the term. He excitedly took his report card to his dad. Alex's father was happy with his results. He took him to Mukulu's shop and bought him a new bicycle. Alex went back home on his new bicycle. All his friends were happy for him. He promised to ride his bicycle with them.
