It all began in 2014 when I graduated from Makerere University as an Electronic Engineer and got a fiancee who proposed to marry me. His name was Patrick. I got to know him from our local church. He was an accountant at Centenary Bank.

When I accepted Patrick's marriage proposal he asked me to introduce him to my parents. The news was exciting. I shared it with my parents right away. My parents welcomed the idea and requested Patrick to hold the introduction ceremony soon. We fixed the date for our introduction on Saturday, 15th Nov 2014.

On the set date, Patrick, his friends and his relatives came to my parents' home for the introduction ceremony. The function began at was Mr. Baguta. As soon as the guests settled down, he read the programme to them and followed it strictly.

It was my big day, I was called to introduce my fiance to the gathering. The mother, my sisters and friends accompanied me. Slowly, I moved to where my fiance had sat and introduced him to my people. Drums beat to the loudest and dancers danced to their best.

In that jovial mood, Patrick's group brought in the gifts for my parents. Among them were two cows and three goats as the bride price expressed by Patrick's commitment, my parents accepted him to become their son-in-law. They invited him to organise a religious marriage which he accepted to do.

Our wedding was on 01 Dec, 2014. That day our bridal car came very early in the morning to take us to the salan. After the salan, we went straight to St Joseph's church for the wedding ceremony.

At exactly 2:00pm, Rev. Joseph Kimbugwe joined us in holy matrimony and presented the marriage certificate to us. We took photographs with our relatives before leaving church.
