One day, as Muntu was returning home from his coffee shamba, he met a wild dog. At first he thought it was a friendly dog. So, he showed it a finger sign as if he was calling it. Immediately, the dog jumped on him and bit his finger. When he screamed, the animal dashed away.

There was no one to give him first aid. He tried to stop the bleeding but he couldn't. So he quickly ran home and when his wife saw the injured finger, she got scared.

She then went to call a neighbor who could carry Muntu on the bicycle to the hospital. By the time she returned, Muntu had already died.

It was shocking news to all the people of Kibu. Men, women and children wailed when they looked at Muntu's body.

With kind understanding, she banishes fear,

A teacher is blessed with patience so rare;
A voice soft and gentle, a heart sweet and fair,
She lends of her knowledge,
That each child might see,
The reason of learning, and accept graciously.

What is a teacher? -----a heart-warming smile,
A very good listener, so much that is worthwhile,
A playmate at recess, what pleasant delight;
A stem referee if someone starts a fight.
