SECTION B (50 Marks) (Questions 51 to 55 carry ten marks each)

51. Read the passage below and then answer, in full sentences the guestions that follow.

One talks about school, another thinks about reading and writing. However, before one imagines how reading and writing started in Uganda, one should ask oneself "Was there education before reading and writing came to Uganda?"

The answer to the question above is, Yes there was. So many years ago, communities had a way of imparting knowledge, skills and values to their young ones. For example in central Uganda, people gathered around fire places in the evening after work. Here, they told stories, riddles and poems. These were so interesting that all children paid attention. They learnt a lot of values like hard work, responsibility, resourcefulness, reliability, respect for elders and leaders.

Much as the fire place was important, the elders taught young ones practical skills. The boys were taught how to hunt, make bark-cloths and how to make things out of metals – black-smithing. The girls too were taught practical skills like cookery, gardening, baby sitting and laundry. The children learnt all these through practice. That is why it is called practical learning. This type of education prepared children to become useful to their communities. Children grew up knowing exactly what to do. Can you imagine that children learnt all these without reading and writing!

When the Christian missionaries came to Uganda, they introduced reading, writing and numeracy. They trained teachers and built schools (classrooms). Children started going to school instead of learning at work. This type of education is called formal education.

Today, there are many schools in Uganda. However, what parents need is practical education in schools to prepare their children for a better future.

b)	Was there education in Uganda before reading and writing came?
c)	In which part of Uganda did people sit around fire places?
d)	When did people gather around fire places?

g)	What is black-smithing?
h)	Which type of education prepared children to become useful to their communities?

53. Read the following poem carefully and then answer, in full sentences the questions that follow:

By keeping "a long hand" short

By sparing people's lives

By driving while we are sober,

By reporting the criminals to police,

By practicing acceptable morals in a society

We are keeping peace

Peace encourages development,
Peace promotes unity and co-operation,
Without a peaceful society,
There is no room for peaceful people;
Peace is a bridge for success,
For without it, the society produces failures.

Together, let's ensure peace,
Let's ensure no address for crimes,
Let's destroy the homes of the criminals,
Let's change the criminals' lives for the better,
Let's ensure no jobs for prison guards,
For without peace, no better living.
